

INSIDE THE MOST STYLISH SUITCASES

Meticulously planned (and folded) or thrown in a bag at the last minute, mastering the art of packing is easier said than done. We asked four fashionable frequent flyers how they do it:

Kim Hersov

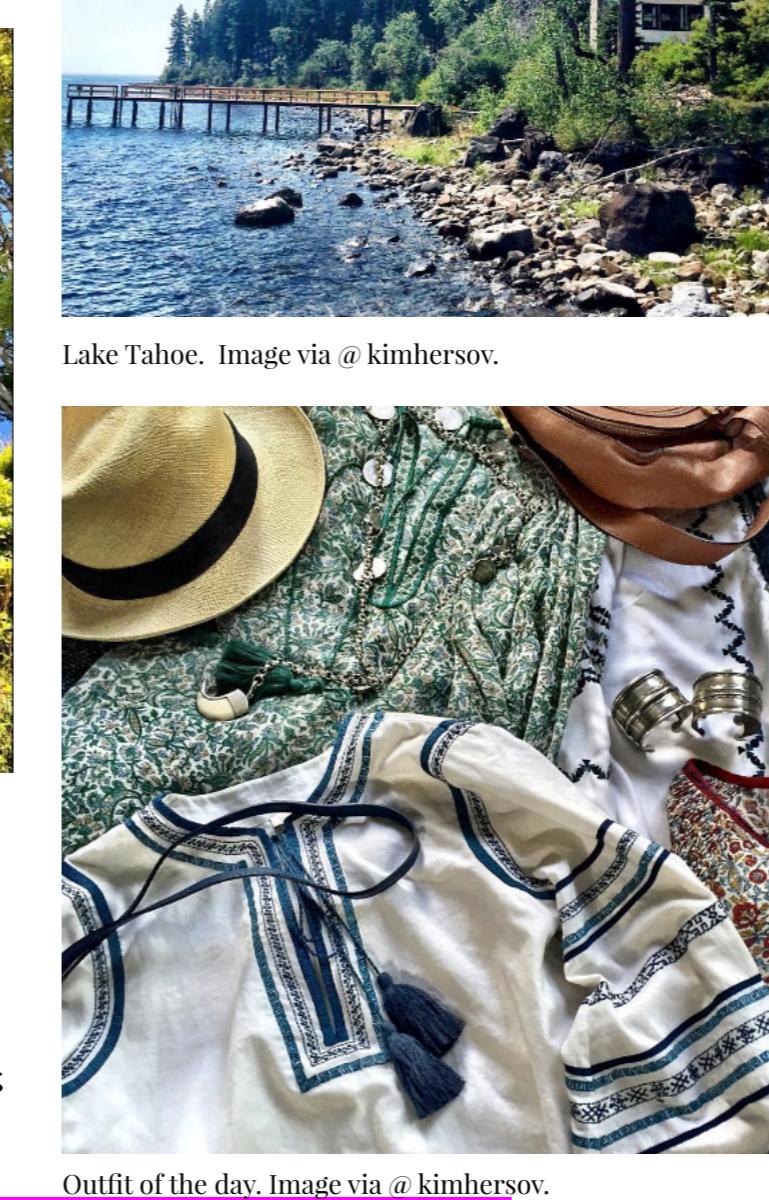

fashion editor and Talitha co-founder based in London

"This summer I'm in India for Talitha, Mykonos and Lake Tahoe in my native California, which is beautiful and very relaxed. Prep is key for any trip: I spend time pulling out what I want to pack and then editing to make sure it all works together. I used to swim competitively and am a bikini and a one-piece girl – my brand of the moment is Marysia Swim. My vacation look is bohemian with a Californian twist."

Serafina Sama

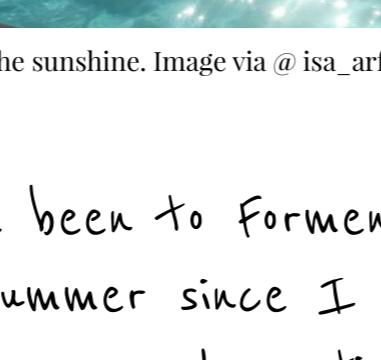

Isa Arfen founder based in London

"I hate packing and always postpone the process until about four hours before my flight, then frantically throw my entire bedroom into a suitcase. My must-packs include black bikinis, white shirts and '90s Levis cut-off jeans. I'll be wearing vintage white dresses à la Bianca Jagger and handmade clogs when sightseeing. Good music, good friends, good food, some dancing and a lot of laughing are my idea of vacation heaven!"

Michela Panero

Jewellery designer based in Milan

"This summer I'm travelling around Croatia by boat, indulging my passion for scuba diving, and spending time with my children in Tuscany. I cannot take off without lip balm, moisturizing cream, ear plugs, music and a note pad for ideas. I love the relaxed look – kaftans, maxi dresses and jeans – with the right jewellery, they can look super glamourous."
