His cult collections are designed to be admired in motion. Sensuality balances fractal-like flowing while the protection implied by skillful drapery is tempered with romance.

Colombian born and adopted by French parents, the palpable clash of cultures in Ackermann's work stems from his nomadic childhood and globetrotting lifestyle.

"It's a tough world outside and I want to have this gracefulness, this brightness, happiness," Ackermann told vogue.com. "To show the other side of what we are confronted with every day."

AW16 shows off Martens' melting pot of historical and contemporary references. Ruching adds subversive sex appeal to velvet and denim while bishop sleeves give tops major impact.

2

Martens was Vetements founder Demna Gvasalia's fit model while he studied at The Antwerp Royal Academy of Fine Arts and previously worked at Jean Paul Gaultier.

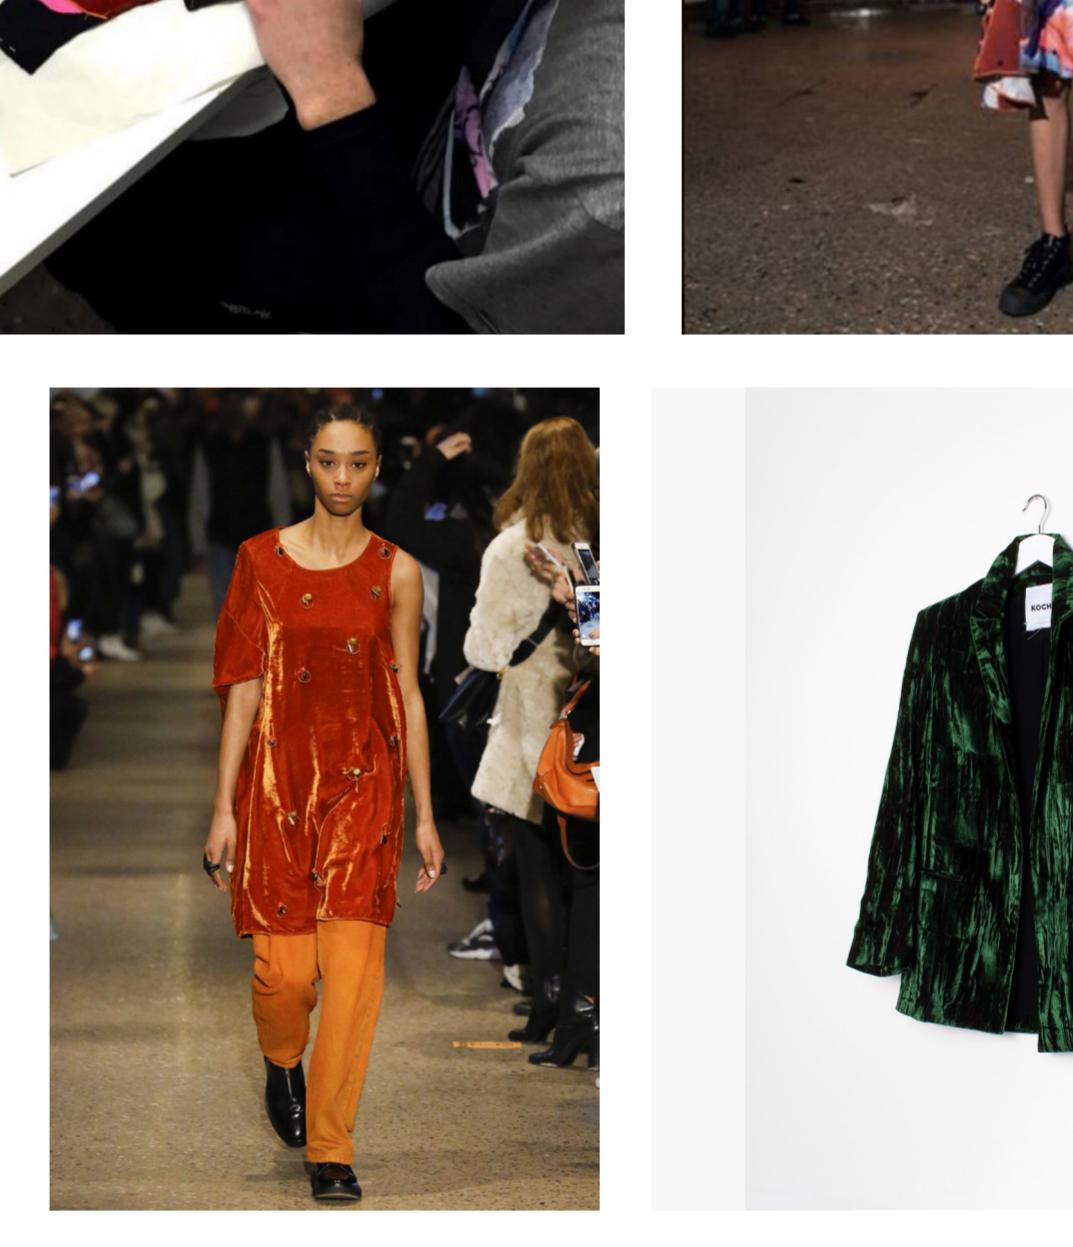

5

Proposing an experimental blend of menswear and womenswear, the off-beat femininity the Belgian achieves is impeccably tailored and revolves around elongated silhouettes and ingenious details.

3

Named on the 2016 LVMH prize shortlist, Rihanna is currently rocking Y/Project on her Anti World Tour and Swiss stylist Ursina Gysi has already been streetstyle snapped in the brand.
